

The dragon's growl becomes a roar as you reach the door, shoving the pick into the lock you begin to unlock the door. You struggle to unlock the door but already you can hear footsteps coming nearer.

Your pick is pushed from the lock as a key is inserted from the other side and moments later the door swings open. Several guards rush in, you are grabbed and roughly thrown to the floor. You whimper slightly as a hand winds through your hair and yanks your head up. The bone pick is thrust in front of you.

"Care to explain this?" One asks.

"She had that with her when she came in." The dragon shouts. "That's how she escaped."

Twisting your head painfully round you glare at the traitorous lizard. There is no way you are letting it get you in even more trouble. "The dragon gave it to me." you announce "It tried to talk me into letting it out."

"She's lying" protests the dragon. The guard holding you hair lets go, dropping your head against the stone floor. Ears ringing from the blow you miss most of the frantic conversation between the guards.

Finally they lift you too your feet and carry you back towards your cell. At the very least it seems the fight has been postponed. Your relief turns to confusion as they carry you past the door to your cell then to horror as they stop in front of the dragon's cell.

The dragon gives you a look of pure malice as one of the guards unlocks the door. You begin to struggle. "Don't put me in there. Please. I won't try to escape again. I'll do anything just don't..." The door opens and you are shoved through.

Clank you hear the cell door close and lock behind you. "Enjoy your meal. It's the last you will be getting in a long time." One of the guards warns the dragon before they turn and leave.

Behind you you can hear the dragon growling but you choose not to turn round. Without warning the growl turns to a roar of fury, pouncing on you from behind the dragon pins you to the floor. "I helped you escape. I trusted you. You not only left me to die you sold me out to the guards and ruined any chance of escape I had left." the dragon leans close to your ear. "Little human, I am going to make your last moments so very unpleasant."