

Anthem of the North

By: C. H. Marlow

Howl like the wolf, roar like the bear, protect the fair north, for you were born to dare.

Set upon the pines and maples as you go, trust in the breath and the blood as you row.

Make like an eagle, and sore like a star, light the way for others, both near and far.

For now you've found the North but your journey's just begun, there's but one more thing that must be done.

Howl like the wolf, roar like the bear, protect the fair north, for you were born to dare.

© Cooper Haxton Marlow 2019