Background: Ashley Harper was a kitten born into a family lineage that was well known for being devoted to the arts. Her parents raising her in a happy life where they encouraged and supported her into experimenting creatively.

Numerous forms of art tried at least once.

And always moving forward in her efforts to live up to her family's legacy of artists, poets, writers, sculptors, and architects.

Ashley was always praised by her teachers and tutors as the "perfect student". The top of her class. Hampered by her time. The one that would put her town on the map someday.

If things continued to work out, it was most assured that the Harper family legacy would remain untarnished and unblemished.

With every passing year, Ashley's skill sets grew and it became clear as day that she was a true Harper and more!

Alas, fate would pull her life in a different direction when the time came for her to set out for college.

One day, Ashley left town with little warning. Not to her friends nor her family.

And the only person that she provided information on where she might have been headed was the local town disappointment and nut Colin Lexington.

And he wasn't telling anybody if it ran the risk of the Harper family's wrath.

Ashley lived a happy and perfect life. It didn't make sense that she would give it up.
