

"And now it's time for the moment you've all been waiting for, the unveiling of the new product line you've been wanting to see for months.... The Three's Company suite!"

Once the applause died down, the announcer gestured towards the curtains as they opened. "Now please welcome our model, the beautiful, the handsome, the illustrious, Athra Soujin!"

Athra stepped out from behind the curtains as they opened, three red pandas walking in unison, each body showing off different parts of the Three's Company line of body parts. The announcer spoke as Athra's graceful motions showed off and accentuated each part as eir counterpart was talking about it.

"Of course, the most-anticipated feature is what you see right here, the TripleMind brain, which comes as a set of three and allows you to wear three bodies at once. Allow me to repeat that; it lets you wear three completely separate bodies at once! Designed by our award-winning team of neurothaumologists, the TripleMind is everything you could want in a brain: the three minds, as the name suggests, allowing you to devote your full attention to three things at once, the processing power to match the best on the market, and a completely tunable mental matrix for those of you who like to mess with your minds.

"But that's not the only thing we have to offer. The Three's Company product line was made to address a problem in the market: a severe lack of parts designed to be in a set of three. With that in mind, our very best designers have been working for months to bring you what is undeniably the best on the market. We have sets of three legs of all varieties--what Athra's first body here is wearing now is our Triathlon line of dromaeosaur-styled legs, perfect for joggers and sprinters alike, guaranteed to get you to work almost as fast as your car!"

The raptor-legged Athra dashed to the end of the walkway as the announcer spoke, three legs moving fluidly in a simple yet intricate pattern. Ey stopped at the end and stretched eir legs, showing off every contour and the subtle musculature that moved under the surface.

"These legs come with two matching tails, of course, and have interchangeable skins. Each order comes with one skin in your choice of fur, scales, or feathers, with more purchasable for a small fee. There's a wide selection of patterns available, and if you still can't find the one you want, we do custom patterns as well! Our color match guarantee extends to these as well, of course, just like every other item in our catalogue."

Athra's second body walked forward, slowly padding along the catwalk as the raptor-legged one stepped back. This body had five feline legs, a taur configuration with two in front and three behind. The hefty endowments this body carried drew more than a little whispered comments from the crowd, but it seems the announcer hadn't quite gotten to those yet, as he continued to focus on the legs.

"Of course, that's not the only set of legs we have! If you'll turn your attention to the next of Athra over there, you'll see a sample of our feline legs, both non-tauric and tauric fore-, mid-, and hindlegs available in pairs or trios. They come with all the same custom skinning as the other legs--in fact, every part in this line does--and have a few additional options as well. These come with customizable paw sizes, ranging from the petite to the downright ridiculous, if that's your thing! If you buy at least six legs, you get a free dedicated limb processor hindbrain attachment as well--meaning less trouble figuring out how to get all those legs to move how you want them to!

"And over here," he continued, as the third Athra walked forward, "you'll see a sample of our plantigrade legs, for when you want something a little unusual. There's just a certain beauty to the simplicity of the straight lines in these, I think; they're one of my favorites. Now, before I forget to mention it, it's a pretty minor feature, but one I personally like quite a bit: all of our anthro legs, at least those in sets of three, have a hinged pelvis." The plantigrade and raptor-legged Athras both demonstrated this, facing different halves of the crowd. "This allows you to put your middle leg comfortably forward of your outer two, giving you a more stable, comfortable standing stance. And, on top of that, it angles your two groins outward, which I am sure you can imagine some interesting uses for.

"These aren't all the legs we offer, either! The full catalogue is available for your perusal, but you'll find that most any leg shape you can imagine is in there, and probably a few you can't, too! But Athra here is out of bodies to demonstrate them on, and I'm sure all of you want to get to something different, so moving on..." he paused, making a sweeping gesture as two of the Athras stepped back, leaving only the raptor-legged one.

"We are also pleased to present to you our line of torsos, designed with any physique you could possibly want and attachment points for up to six arms, with or without wings. We here at Maker don't believe in the cross-line incompatibility that some of our competitors do, so these torsos are fully, one hundred percent compatible with every previous line of arms we've made, no adapter necessary. In fact, every part we offer, including every part I've shown you already and every part you'll see in the remainder of this presentation, is compatible with every other part we've made. With that in mind, the Three's Company product line doesn't include any new arms or wings, but instead we offer special, reduced-price six-arm bundles of any model of arm we sell, so you can keep using the arms you love, or get one of the tried-and-true classics like the Strongarm set Athra here has on.

"Some of our most exciting new products are those for heads. As I'm sure you've noticed, this body of Athra's has three heads. All of our TripleMind brains are compatible with most any secondary brains on the market, or you can put all three into three heads on a single body if you want! But three heads is nothing new and exciting... but three muzzles is! Many of the heads we offer as part of this line have three attachment points for muzzles, of variable configuration. Here, Athra has the triangular arrangement on each of eir heads, but this Athra has them all stacked, and the other has them in a horizontal row. Custom configurations are available as well, as are ones with only two muzzles, or just one, if that's your style.

"We also have eye plates with up to six sockets, for those times when two eyes just aren't enough. If you'll direct your attention to Athra again, you can see all of our options for eyes at once." Athra turned all three bodies for the audience to see, lights illuminating eir faces. The raptor-legged wah had one eye on eir left head, three on the middle one, and five on the right one, while the felitaur wah had four eyes on the left and six on the right, and the plantigrade one had a basic two-eyed visage. "On top of this, we have special sets of three eyes available with any of the options our popular Farseer line offers. We even offer multi-pupilled eyes, with a special limited-edition vivid purple tripupil model to go with the theme of threes."

Athra twirled, giving the audience a quick review of what the announcer had mentioned already, as the stage lighting shifted upward to draw attention to eir ears.

"All heads in the Three's Company line come standard with six ears of your choice, and for a limited time only you can get a second set of ears free if you pre-order. These ears are guaranteed to make sounds from as low as sixteen hertz all the way up to forty kilohertz clearly audible, working together to let you hear the finest nuances of music. Just like a surround sound system, we use multiple ears with different-sized inner ears to cover a range much wider than a single pair could alone.

"But I know you all didn't come here to listen to me ramble on about ears. You want to see the good stuff, and let me tell you, it's very good stuff! To start with, we offer sets of three breasts in all shapes and sizes, each one with attachment points for up to three nipples or nipple-replacements on each breast. They're made to fit all the standard two-wide attachment points, so they'll work just fine with your existing torso as well! We also offer as an option our patented FlavorFull system: tired of your breasts just producing milk all the time? Get a bust with FlavorFull and you can make them produce whatever you want!"

The raptor-legged Athra produced three of what look like beer taps from some hidden pocket, attaching them to eir previously bare breasts and using them to fill three cups with three different-colored liquids: what looked to be the traditional milk, some sort of cola, and a pale pink liquid that gently fizzes like champagne.

"And we have a new feature: FlavorFull now works on more than just breasts! We now have FlavorFull-enabled testes as well, balls that can produce any liquid you desire. The balls we offer as part of the Three's Company line all have complimentary FlavorFull installed, and like all of our modern balls, are fully functional with no need for a secondary processor such as a prostate. Naturally, our theme for this line is still three of everything, so the balls we offer as part of the Three's Company line come in sets of three, rather than the usual two. All of our genitals come in a wide range of sizes, and can be made to order if your preferred size isn't one we offer standard--for no extra charge, to boot."

As the announcer spoke, Athra removed the skirts from both of eir anthro bodies, allowing the audience to see the balls ey was modelling. Each body showed off three balls in each of two different sizes, ranging from apple-sized on the plantigrade body's left all the way up to beachball-sized on the digitigrade body's right--and then Athra brought eir third body up, stage lights turning to bring focus onto what had earlier drawn the audience's interest, twin sets of six balls that put all the rest to shame.

"What you see here are our five standard sizes, ranging from the modest to the straight-up enormous, all of them equipped with Norec quick-recovery technology. Remember, Maker is the only brand to give you quick-recovery balls standard, with no upcharge, and our new line is no exception.

"And of course, most people don't wear balls alone, and our famous custom shafts are getting a special three for the price of one deal with your purchase of any two sets of Three's Company balls. They all come with or without sheaths, and sets of three can be all in one sheath or three separate ones at your discretion.

"Those shafts need somewhere to go into, too, and we've got you covered there as well. Our patented Stretch Unlimited vaginas now come in sets of three, with the same peel-and-stick attachment feature you know and love, so you can stick them on wherever you like. Of course, these are a bit too small from the outside to properly show on stage, but I assure you, they're more than big enough on the inside!"

"Now, if you'd like to see more," the announcer continued, "there are displays set up in the main hall outside the auditorium. And don't forget, we're launching this line on March 21st, but preorders are open now!"