

An Interview with Gallows

The Casual Kinkster Show

By Teradyne Ezeri
Story © TeraDyne Ezeri 2018

Interviewer:

Welcome to “Casual Kinkster”, where I interview people known in various kink communities of the Butterfly Empire and its allies. Gallows, mind starting off by telling us a bit about yourself?

Gallows:

Sure! I’m Gallows, or Galley for those who prefer it. I work as the leader of Freelance Team One among the Delta Worlds. I’m usually the one who gets called in for either the weird stuff no one else will touch, or for the jobs no one else is willing to take. I also do other freelance work on the side by going out to look for it.

Interviewer:

Where’re ya from?

Gallows:

My birthplace is Classified, Level 0 Clearance only. Only a select few can know that. I live on Omega, at a complex known as Breakwater Omega. You won’t find it on any starcharts, though.

Interviewer:

It says here your name is actually rather apt for what your interests are?

Gallows:

Ah! Yes. I know your show is called “Casual Kinkster”, but this is something that’s a bit more than just casual for me. See, I’m half phoenix. If I die, I just come back in a new body formed by the magic flowing through my essence. And death is never painful for me, so that made death rather erotic. Hanging and drowning are my top two ways to enjoy it, along with being eaten. Thus Gallows for hanging, and my nickname “Galley” involving being food. I’m a casual snuff fan.

Interviewer:

Fascinating. Any other kinks that you’d like to share with us? It says you have a long list of erotic interests, so perhaps a condensed version?

Gallows:

Well, one of my mates says it best: “Weird shit.” Inanimate transformations, especially if they have a delayed reaction to my phoenix rebirthing, or leave me partially “normal”; Merging and conjoining with others, especially in really odd and exotic configurations; Modularity; I have a massive boner for sex while in armor; Cock transformation, especially disembodied shafts; living food transformations; latex; living metal beings; mechas; underwater sex; zero-gravity sex; and implied long-term or permanent situations, such as being stuck as an art exhibit for an extended period. That’s just a small taste, though.

Interviewer:

My word, you must have quite the number of stories to tell. It's also been revealed to me that you're a bit of an adventurer. Do you incorporate your kinks into those exploits, or prefer to keep it professional?

Gallows:

Are you kidding? One of my favorite things to do is using a set of my enchanted armor to dive deep without air tanks, last as long as I can before I suffocate while getting myself off at the last moment, then wake up next to my old body and keep going with a full breath of air to sustain me. I also quite enjoy prodding local wildlife if they seem rather dangerous, since most are large enough to eat me whole. And of course, not knowing exactly what some magical trinket will do to me is quite exciting as well.

Interviewer:

You certainly don't keep a quiet life, from the sound of it.

Gallows:

I try not to. That's boring. It's also why I work for Shirohoshi Enterprises as a freelancer. Taking gigs that match my interest is something that helps me relax when I need that, or to make me feel a bit more alive when it scratches a much needed itch.

Interviewer:

Oh? Give us an example.

Gallows:

Well, I'm the designer behind the CGX-12217 "Candy Gryphon" suits that Shirohoshi recently began selling. So far, I've taken a few gigs to introduce people to them, and a couple where I acted as part of the dinner line for a couple parties. Even got to be a nice safe-for-public birthday cake for a kid's party. They didn't know I was the cake of course, but they enjoyed every bite.

Interviewer:

So, you allow your kinks to flow into more public spaces without sexualizing them?

Gallows:

Of course. I've done it with training teens how to dive safely in gear, and shown members of the public how to approach feral wildlife safely, among many other gigs. I think one of the most interesting was being transformed into a throne for a monarch while they visited for a few days, way back when the Butterfly Empire was still forming. I couldn't get the materials or anything that I needed, so I improvised and became the furniture myself. Learned quite a bit about diplomacy during that time, too.

Interviewer:

Oh! You do work for the Butterfly Empire?

Gallows:

Occasionally, yes. Mostly interior decorating, a bit of exploration, and some random design jobs for when they have events. I'm just glad there's not enough holidays and festivals to start a drinking game about them, though. I've seen some places like that. It stops being fun after the second week of weird celebrations.

Interviewer:

I see. I've noticed you stay in a quadrupedal state. Any reason why?

Gallows:

Actually, I'm a semi-quad. I can walk just fine on two legs or four, but I prefer four. As for why, it's mostly comfort and utility. I can haul more cargo, move faster, and get through smaller openings on four legs than I can on two, and gives me a chance to help others a little more efficiently in some situations. Especially if I need to take someone to a location. Faster for them to climb on my back than have them follow me.

Interviewer:

And I assume the comfort portion of it is also due to other interests as well?

Gallows:

No, though it's a nice bonus that things like ponyplay get a bit of a boost from it.

Interviewer:

It says here that you have several lovers. Anything you'd like to share about them?

Gallows:

Just that I love them dearly. I try not to bring any undue stress on them, so I won't name names. They know who they are, though.

Interviewer:

It seems we're running a bit low on time. Is there anything you'd like to say to our viewers before we wrap it up?

Gallows:

Keep it fun, and remember that some of your interests can be used for more than just sexual satisfaction. Educating and helping others can go a long way, and you can honestly have a blast doing it if you just put your mind to it.

Interviewer:

Thank you for your time, Gallows. And thank you to all of our viewers for watching. Keep it kinky.