

Moonstruck

Irbisgreif

I see you, you know, as you pass by each night;
I know you don't see me. Not trying to creep,
But I love you. You are just like a bright
Diamond. You call to me, and I do not sleep.

I imagine if I were lucky, and you were mine. 5
How wonderful it would be, I think I would
Love you beyond all measure—human or divine.
I swear, I would adore you more than I should.

I know that others have had a taste of you;
I know that others will taste you more still; 10
I know that I wail until my face is all blue,
Because I am certainly to be denied my fill.

When I dwell on it, I wish you and I would die,
As I gaze on your glitter up there in the sky.
