

Dragon's world

Once upon a time, thousands of years ago dragons roamed the earth, they would kill humans and destroy their homes, but this is if dragons were warm hearted creatures. They were hunting, playing, and having a great time. Hours later, a meteor shower happens and takes the lives of thousands of dragons, but some escape. One of those few, was named Ghast, his scales are as blue as great, glimmering sapphires. Once the meteor shower ends, he leaves the safety of his shelter and looks around to see some of his closest friends and relatives lying on the ground, dead. The land was indeed, as barren as a desert.

He goes to explore the world, crying and sniffing, after a while, he lays in a cave, trying to forget it and then he lays down to rest. The next morning, he then says, determined, "I must find my family to make sure they are safe, even though I never really got to know them, I will look high and low, in lakes and caves, anywhere to find them, no matter how long it takes or how tough the challenge will be, I will find them." His idea to find his family was a labyrinth in itself, but then he thinks, 'is it worth it or not?'. He gets up, leaves the cave, looks back one last time, knowing that he will not come back to grieve or mourn for them, he will whenever he gets a chance. After a few days, he finds a strange, new land all lush and green. He is surprised to see a land that was not affected by any of the meteors. The trees and flowers were waving hello as the nice, cool breeze was batting on Ghast's body.

Ghast explores the land for a while and says, "this place is great." As he explores the land he goes and hunts to get some food and finds a place to eat and rest when he gets tired. He finds himself a cave and starts to eat. As the days draws to night, Ghast starts to head into slumber but a bright, white light outside the cave is keeping him awake. He looks at it for a bit and then it disappeared, he wondered, "what was that." After seeing that, he try's to find out who or what it was and he follows it. After a while, it disappeared all together, and it was midnight so he could not see very well. Since he couldn't find out what that was, he went back to the cave and then went to sleep. The next morning, it was still dark so he went out to hunt more, but at the entrance, there already was a pile of food and he thought, 'who put this here.' And then he realized that the strange light could have been another dragon and said, "I thought I was the only one that escaped from meteor shower, I guess not." After saying that, he decides to mourn the loss of friends and family, once he finishes, he will see if there is another dragon around.

It's been a month since the meteor shower struck and he is still trying to see if there is another dragon around. It is a few minutes until it reaches rising-sun, so he try's to find a place to see it happen. He finds a cliff with the perfect view of the sun, but it seems like there is someone already there, he says to himself quietly, "it is another dragon and she is so beautiful. I would introduce myself, but I don't know what she'd do if she saw someone else." Ghast finds a tall tree with a bunch of covering and watches the sun rise, "it is so pretty, I would not have been able to see this where I came from." After a while he realized, "what if she was the one who put the pile of food at the entrance of the cave, I feel like she might be into me and want me to be her mate, no, she won't, she doesn't even know me." After the sunrise, he stays in the tree to see where she is headed, "it looks like she is going hunting, I should head back to the cave, I'm starved." Ghast heads back to the cave as she is hunting so she doesn't know that he was following her. Back in the cave, he eats the food and lays down to relax, he try's to stay in the cave and see if she will be here. After an hour or so, he goes to find a place with water. He finds a lake of bright, blue, sparkling water and takes a sip, "this has to be the freshest water I've ever had, plus, it is so clear, I can see my reflection on the surface, this land is so much better than I thought. It seems to have also helped me stay calm when I start to feel stressed, I believe." Ghast says.

Back in the cave, it is getting dark, so he starts to head to sleep. Outside the cave the she-dragon is bringing food toward the cave and says, looking at Ghast, "he is so cute, maybe the cutest one I've ever seen, but, how and when should I ask him if he wants to be my mate?" She splits the pile in half so they get an even amount of food, she eats hers and heads back outside of the cave. The next morning, Ghast sees a pile of food at the entrance of the cave and says, "yep, she must be the one who brings the food here, I wish I could thank her but, she only comes at night when I'm asleep." He eats the food and looks around to try to find her and decided to go check the lake to see if she is there. On his way there he decides to do a bit of hunting and stash it somewhere for temporary and he'll gather it on his way back.

He has been here in this land for over a week now and he and the she-dragon decided to meet up on the cliff where they watched the sunrise. She was already there and Ghast was a few steps away. Before, they met up in the cave privately and she said to meet her at the cliff where the sun rises. They are sitting down next to each other, watching the sunrise, "isn't it great, just to watch the sunrise." She said. "Yes, it really is, where I came from, I couldn't see this." Ghast responds. "Why?" She asked. "A meteor shower, the only sky I saw was completely red, no sun or anything, I was lucky enough to escape, I thought to myself after I escaped, what if I was the only one that escaped?" Ghast says. "I looks like your not the only one, I had to escape too and I saw other's escaping." She said. "I never got your name, what is it?" Ghast asked. "Alligat" she says. "Mine's Ghast." He says. Once they finished talking and getting to know each other, they both head back to the cave and talk more. Ghast starts, "I have something to tell you, my first few days here I saw a white light walk past the cave and I was wondering 'who was that' I go to follow it and it kept disappearing, was that you?" She says, "yes it was, I can't control when my scales glow." Ghast was now surprised that it was her and then says, "I don't want to freak you out but, then I see you, sitting on that cliff and I was in a tree because I didn't know what you would've done if you saw me." Alligat says, "it's okay to be afraid of that, some of us would attack and others like me would be a little frightened as well." Ghast was relived to here that she was not mad at him for that, he continued, "As I was watching you, I said this because I was to nervous to tell you then, this exactly, she is so beautiful." Alligat is so surprised and excited that she is so beautiful, she says, with happiness, and gives him a big hug “thank you, it’s been so long since I have heard someone call me beautiful.” Ghast was speechless. Alligat, calming down, says, “just yesterday night, I come in the cave while you’re sleeping, which you probably already figured out, I was nervous too, I say that you’re possibly the cutest dragon I have ever seen.” Ghast was once again speechless, he succeeded to say, “I-I don’t know what to say, thank you, I didn’t think anyone thought of me that way.”

The next few days, Ghast and Alligat have decided they think they are ready to be mates, the session is very difficult but they succeed and are now pure mates. Ghast says, “I am trying to find my family, even though I never really got to know them, are you trying to find someone of your own kin?” Alligat says, “yes actually, I am trying to find my brother, I know my parents like the back of my paw, it’s just my brother is who I’m worried about.” “Why don’t we go find our families together, they might be in the same place.” Ghast brings up. “That would be wonderful.” Alligat says.

They both believe they know where their families could be so the both head there. They heard rumors that this land is filled with tiny humans and villages and that some dragons would kill them and destroy their homes, so both Ghast and Alligat will try to protect them and influence everyone to not hurt them. On the path, they will have to get through many obstacles. They will have to get past rock slides and volcanic eruptions. The path goes on for weeks before they get there, so they will have to be lucky to find places to rest on the way there. They go to hunt for food before they go. Once they finished, they took the trail, and started on the adventure.

They have started there adventure just yesterday and they were having a tough time trying to stay on the path, since there was tons of fog. Once the fog cleared, they come across a fork in the road, “which way do we go?” Ghast asked. Alligat looks at the ground, flies up and blow some dust of the ground to reveal footprints on each path. One path had dragon footprints and the other had the same kind, but from something else, they don’t know which ones which. “Wait a sec.” Ghast says. He examined the footprints carefully and concludes that the trail on the right is the wrong path, plus, that path looked dry and barren at the other side, dragons wouldn't want to live there. They take the left path and find a new land, lush, green, and loaded with prey. "This must be the place, but where is everyone?" They asked each other. "Maybe this is the wrong place, we should keep looking." Alligat says. What they didn't know, was that this place had lots of problems, there was a volcano that hasn't erupted for centuries and it could erupt at anytime and it has lots of paths between cliffs, if the volcano erupts, it could cause rockslides. After taking the path, they decided to rest and hunt for food. That night, they hear a loud rumbling noise and they look at the sky, it's covered in ash, "I thought there wasn't any problems here, I guess we thought wrong." After they finished, they head to a path on the other side of the valley.

At the other side, they walk along the path. Then, they have to try to avoid falling rocks, but what Ghast didn't know was that, Alligat has a powerful blade in her tail that she can draw out when they are in trouble. During their time on the path, they were alerted by a rumbling sound and look up to see boulders falling from the clifftops, blocking the exit. After a minute, Alligat brings up, "stand back." "Why?" Ghast asked. "Just watch." Alligat says. Ghast, backing away, sees a blade extend out of her tail, she flies up and busts the boulders, "Come on, we got to go." Ghast, trying to understand what happened, follows right behind her. They reached a land with all the other dragons, they are creating what looks like a kingdom. Alligat, retracting her blade, her and Ghast are happy to see their families and friends. Ghast looks around to find his parents and Alligat goes to find her brother. Ghast, still trying to figure out how a blade was in Alligat's tail and why it was so strong. Ghast hears his name, it sounded worried so he heads to where it came from and finds himself in a den with which he believes are his parents and he was in shock, he is given a big hug and is happy to finally see his parents, safe and sound.