

Dirge for the Planet (Nuallán English Localization Rewrite)

Original Song by Firelake

A miraculous crystal,
Given by the stars,
I can foresee the future
In this wondrous glass.
Lies carved within the caves,
sank deep within our souls,
Earth's doomsday is close.

Dancing on the ashes of the world,
I behold the stars,
A heavy gale blows unto my face,
Stirring up the dust.
Barren lands so desperate to blossom,
Dark stars strive to shine,
I still remember blue oceans
In this dying world.

The seas are empty,
the rivers are all dead,

All the planet's cities are now deserted lands.

Annihilation claims this day,
Life slowly whispers, "We remain."

Dirge for the planet,
Dirge for the Earth,
Dirge for the planet,
Dirge for the Earth.

Dancing on the ashes of the world,
I behold the stars,
A heavy gale blows unto my face,
Stirring up the dust.
Barren lands so desperate to blossom,
Dark stars strive to shine,
I still remember blue oceans
In this dying world.

Note

Instead of being a direct translation this was re-written to be easier to understand in English, as well as singability and carrying over the original themes.
