

Metalheads are humans who were infected ,randomly or because their thirst of destruction, by a black, big, cristal that comes from the Metal, the thing that is the creator of life.

The infection is painful and affect two things.

First, the size. A metalhead doesn't turn as a giant forever, but they can grow at will...or not, it depends of their personality and context.

Each Metalhead has a fixed gigantic size and a fixed human size, they can't take size in between.

Second thing affected is their brain. Metalheads, thought they are still humans, are all attracted by human's flesh and blood, except Virginie who is still a human. This predatory side, however, would never shows up when they are still human sized but only giant sized.

So, vore is strongly a part of their life. They often catch humans to eat them, but they seemed to be less evil or not, depending of their personality.

Not every Metalhead is a sadistic giant. Some, but it's rare, are quite human friendly but they would stil be predators, just it wouldn't be fatal for the humans.

Though their personality isn't changed a lot, they barely view themselves as humans, some still do but the majority views themselves are gods or superior beings.

Each cristal has a name that become the Metalhead's secondary name.

Metalheads react quite strangely around Metal's cores, the cristals that are smaller and don't turn their owner into another Metalhead.

They are quite more docile, it depends though, and obedient, kind under control but accidents could happen...

Metalheads don't age anymore. Also, some of them have specific powers, even if their size is often their only power...
