

2014 Year of the Horse (Chinese Year 4711)

Yesterday, at 11pm, began the cycle of the new moon; and with it, the beginning of the Year of the Horse. The Horse is the seventh animal of the Chinese zodiac and is the symbol of free will and adventure. The Horse is the Yang fire animal and is associated with the direction of south, the season of summer, the lunar cycle of the first quarter moon, hot weather, the color of red, the sense of touch, and the body's heart. This current year of the Chinese Lunar Calendar is of the Wood element and is associated with the direction of the East, the season of Spring, the lunar cycle of the new moon, windy weather, the color of green, the sense of smell, and the body's liver. This year of the Horse has two Li Chun; the Eyes of Spring. This makes it a very auspicious year and one that is bright with good fortune for things like planed events and goals.

To be born in this year will grant Horses the expansive mind of yang wood. While the aspect of yin for wood is that of deep roots, entrenched in the earth, providing stability, yang wood is like the many branches that reach out into the sky collecting the wind and sun. Wood is the strengthening element of fire. It provides the necessary fuel that energizes any flame, emblazing the spirit of creativity, passion, and ambition. Horses imbued with the qualities of yang wood will have a keener mind to aid in their life pursuits compared to other Horses. Just as a tree faces all directions, the already instinctual Horse will be more aware of their situations. This heightened sense of surroundings allows the Horse to more easily avoid the pitfalls that other Horses would most likely fall to. Horses are naturally high energy due to their affinity with fire. Wood can very easily add to this enthusiasm for life and help to propel them further than first thought possible, but there is only so much tinder for any campfire and unless the Horse is careful he will burn himself out before his goal has been reached. Just as the arms of a tree grab at all corners of the heavens, they also assume the perch and home of many animals. The more the tree reaches to out, the harder the winds try to topple the mighty oak. With branches full of wind and critter, the Wood Horse needs to be careful not to take on too many tasks at once or else face a stress that would uproot any evergreen.

The Horse is native to the elemental fury that is Yang Fire. Its flame is the one that would burn a landscape so as to induce change and new beginnings. The Horse is naturally passionate about life. The fire that burns in their heart is one not easily extinguished and can stir the dormant energies of those who would lend their attention to the Horse's suggestions. The Horse has an uncanny ability to know how to react to any situation. Their amazing instinct is equaled by none and is known to get them out of many predicaments. But just as any animal sprints ahead with unbridled lust, their reflexes will eventually fail and they will stumble. The addition of yang wood to the Horse's fire may seem like a disaster in the making but the tree only sways, it never steps forward. Yang wood will only allow for a keener mind. The wood Horse is more able to stay his hooves and plan his actions than if he was born to another element. Once the Horse has plotted his course, his mind is locked on achieving success. This also lets them keep the aid of more friends as any other Horse is more likely to leave their admirers and colleagues behind in a cloud of smoke and dust whilst they frantically toil toward their ambitions end.

To those already born, be aware of how your own elements react with wood. Always remember that there is balance in all things, including the elements. The five elements of metal, water, wood, fire, and earth all react with each other in positive and negative ways. There is also a cycle of interaction for what elements strengthen each other and which elements hinder each other. Starting with the pattern of strength: from metal you get water (metal taking the form of a cup from which water is poured as well as metals initial state being liquid when heated by fire), from water you get wood (wood is like a plant that is nourished by flowing water and falling rain), from wood you get fire (fire cannot burn without the aid of something like wood to provide substance), from fire you get earth (all things burned by fire are turned to ash that becomes part of the earth), and from earth you get metal (the earth being the home of metal before it is dug up).

When viewing the elements and their pattern of hindrance you will find that: metal is controlled by fire (fire will melt metal and return it to a form that can be shaped and molded), fire is controlled by water (nothing extinguishes fire faster than water), water is controlled by earth (the earth absorbs water and helps to contain it for plants or direct it's flow like a river), earth is controlled by wood (the roots of a tree dig into the soil and acquire a firm grasp, as well as break apart solid stone), and wood is controlled by metal (metal blades can cut a wooden tree branch or shape a piece of lumber).

While these are the elements initial flow of control and being controlled, the elements can interact with each other in other ways. Water may be absorbed by earth, but the earth has its limits and eventually will flood and form a lake, as well as water's ability to erode the earth and carve its own path through a mountain. Earth can also extinguish fire by smothering it, while fire can break boulders if hot enough. Wood can harden and dull the metal blade that would cut it. And metal can take a multitude of forms, from which it can do many things (like digging and moving the earth, holding water, or capping a flame). There is an endless list of ways in which the elements interact with each other. Be aware at how your elements interact with the element of this year; wood.

Along with understanding elemental relationships, someone living in this year should also take notice of how their own animal signs relate with the Horse. The Horse is a very active animal that seeks to walk his own path quickly, rather than casually. They will tend to ignore suggestion unless it fits into their plan of action. They also do not take kindly to others trying to assert dominance over them. But, despite setbacks and disagreements, the Horse rarely holds grudges and prefers to move on with life instead of dwell on missteps. They carry a very positive outlook on life and can make the best of any bad situation that comes their way. A Horse is a wonderful friend to have at your side. With their natural instincts, charisma, ingenuity, and hopeful viewpoints they make good company. Just don't feel upset if you find yourself trailing behind. They don't intend to leave friends stranded, it's just in their nature pursue life with unrestrained vigor.

Animals like the Rat who are very self serving and controlling will not mix well with the Horse and thus do poorly in this year unless they can be more open minded and less constrained in their approach to business matters; being less rigid can go a long way when taking risks. The loyal and understanding Dog realizes the Horse's need for freedom of mind and body while they both share a keen mind for dedicated effort; the Dog will do fine in the year so long as it's element is not in sharp contrast to this year's element. The twelve animals all behave differently and mix in various ways; just as the elements do. Even though Horses tend to work well with each other, they can still meet with clashing blows if not given enough space during disagreements. Even if a person's animal signs are at odds with the animal of the current year, they can still sometimes get along if there is agreement and understanding. Be aware of how your own animal signs relate with this year's animal; the Horse.

Here is a list of the months in the Chinese lunar calendar as they match up to dates in the Gregorian calendar used in modern European type societies. Each month is assigned an animal in the same way that each year, day, and two hour segment is assigned an animal. There are also twenty four solar terms that mark the sun at its 15 and 30 longitudinal degree segments. These solar terms are identified as Sectional Terms that mark each 15 degree segment, and Principal Terms that mark every 30 degree segment. Each solar term also marks a special seasonal event. Please note that the months and terms at the end of the list are carrying over into January and February of the year 2015 in the Gregorian calendar. Also, take note of the occurrence of a second 9th month. This is an extra month that is added every twenty-nine months to readjust the lunar calendar to the solar calendar due to a shortage of days in the lunar calendar when compared to the solar calendar. The extra month always mirrors the month before it.

Months

1. 1st Month: January 31 – February 28 (associated with Tiger)
2. 2nd Month: March 1 – March 30 (associated with Rabbit)
3. 3rd Month: March 31 – April 28 (associated with Dragon)
4. 4th Month: April 29 – May 28 (associated with Snake)
5. 5th Month: May 29 – June 26 (associated with Horse)
6. 6th Month: June 27 – July 26 (associated with Sheep)
7. 7th Month: July 27 – August 24 (associated with Monkey)
8. 8th Month: August 25 – September 23 (associated with Rooster)
9. 9th Month: September 24 – October 23 (associated with Dog)
10. 9th Month: October 24 – November 21 (associated with Dog)*
11. 10th Month: November 22 – December 21 (associated with Boar)
12. 11th Month: December 22 – January 19 (associated with Rat)
13. 12th Month: January 20 – February 18 (associated with Ox)

Solar Terms

1. Sectional Term 1: February 4 – Li Chun/Beginning of Spring
2. Principal Term 1: February 19 – Yu Shui/Rain Water
3. Sectional Term 2: March 5 – Jing Zhi/Waking of Insects
4. Principal Term 2: March 21 – Chun Fen/Spring Equinox
5. Sectional Term 3: April 5 – Qing Ming/Pure Brightness
6. Principal Term 3: April 20 – Gu Yu/Grain Rain
7. Sectional Term 4: May 5 – Li Xia/Beginning of Summer
8. Principal Term 4: May 21 – Xiao Man/Grain Full

Here is a listing of the 355 days in this year's lunar calendar. Each day, month, and first two hour segment is marked with the corresponding element and animal that is representing it. The elements and animals are assigned a prescribed pattern. The pattern of the animals is: Rat, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Sheep, Monkey, Rooster, Dog, and Boar. The pattern of the Elements is Fire, Earth, Metal, Water, and Wood. The Yin and Yang quality of the element for the month or day (as well as year and hour) never has Yang or Yin twice in a row and as well as matches the Yin or Yang quality of the given animal for that day, month, year, or hour. This cyclical pattern has been in effect since the first day it was used 4711 years ago, in the sixty-first year of the reign of Emperor Huang Ti.

Use this list of the days, months, and hours to help plan ahead and understand what times of the year you are likely to do well in and what times of the year you are likely to do bad in. Understand that no matter how bad a day is in conjunction with your own elements and animals, it is always possible to change your approach to the given day or month just as an element that would be controlled by another can change to meet the situation and alter its circumstance.

*Note: I am only listing the element and animal of the first hour of each day instead of all of them. This is to save space and maintain the ease of flow for the chart. If you would like to calculate the animals and elements for each hour then continue to follow the flow of the pattern for the elements and animals (if the first hour is Yang Metal/Rat, than the next hour for that day will be Yin Metal/Ox). Also, the Chinese lunar calendar only has 12 hours in a day. Each of these hours equals 2 hours in the Gregorian calendar (our modern time set). Also, the Chinese day starts at what would be the last hour of the previous day in the Gregorian calendar. So, if the first day of the lunar calendar is listed as February 10, than the first hour of that day is actually starting at 11pm (23:00) on February 9 and ends at 1am on February 10.
