

The Midnight Lycanroc made his way into the forest, the brisk wind brushing up against his fur as he howled into the night sky, buffing his attack stat. He lunged forward, using Shadow Claw on the opposing Ledian, defeating it in one shot. Lycanroc continued to make his way through the forest until he reached a strange looking dead-end, turning his head to the right as the bushes shook. A crystalized Mankey came out and started running towards the Lycanroc, he pulled back his fist and the Lycanroc dodged swiftly as the Mankey's fist hit the ground, a loud thud being heard as a result.

A flash appeared in the corner of Midnight Lycanroc's eye, as he turned a Diancie exposed herself. He ran towards her preparing a Stone Edge, but Diancie moved her hands up, trapping the Lycanroc in a box of dark red crystals. She shot a Flash Cannon into the box of crystals, causing it to glow very brightly.

A few nights later, the now crystalized Midnight Lycanroc was roaming the forest, fully covered in the dark red crystals. It looked at the entrance...waiting. A Grovyle walked into the forest at a moderate pace, glancing around at the tall trees "Rescue a lost Lycanroc...you'd think something as fully evolved as that would actually be able to save itself." he said with a hint of arrogance. "I've been through this place several times and I never once wiped out." he continued as the Crystalized Lycanroc waited.

When the Grovyle finally stopped walking the Lycanroc jumped out from the treeline and pinned the Grovyle. "Hey! Let me go!" he demanded, squirming heavily. Diancie gently floated towards the now pinned and angry Grovyle. "Tell your damn mutt to get off of me!" he yelled at Diancie as his squirming became more intense. Diancie only giggled at the Grovyle "silly Grovyle, you can't escape the crystallization!" Diancie's expression became darker, as Crystal Drone Lycanroc started pummeling the Grovyle.

The squirming and resistance of the Grovyle died down as he was being pummeled by the Crystal Drone Lycanroc. Soon the Crystal Drone stopped and got off of the defeated Grovyle. As Diancie moved her hands up to summon a green crystal box, the Grovyle popped an Oran Berry and recovered to full strength. Grovyle then jumped back onto his feet as Diancie launched a Flash Cannon at the Crystal Box, making them glow a bright green.

Despite being at full strength, Grovyle couldn't look away from the green being flashed into his eyes. Caught off guard by how bright and eye catching it is, he just blankly stared at it. An internal struggle began as he tried to move his body to break the crystal, but his body refused to listen. He continued to stare and struggle against this strange power he never encountered before.

The brightness of the green flash is preventing his mind from forming complete thoughts, no matter how much he fought back he couldn't gain an advantage. The mental struggle continued as Diancie kept a steady beam going, smirking to herself as the Grovyle aimlessly fought back. The flash began to die down as Grovyle's body began listening, little did the Grovyle know this wasn't the end of the fight.

Once the bright light was gone, the Grovyle shook his head, preparing to attack the wall, only to be quickly bombarded by a flashing green light. His eyes locked onto the flashing light as his body submitted quickly once again, the flashing light more effective than the previous lights. His mind was being assaulted by the flashing green light, preventing him from even forming a new thought at all.

Grovyle's mind now began to fade, new thoughts couldn't form, and his will began to falter. Each new flash cracked his will more and more, faster and faster, until the Grovyle's mind fully broke, his eyes hazing over. No thoughts remained as the flashing continued its assault on the Grovyle's broken mind, now effortlessly removing all memories the Grovyle held. Soon the flashing stopped, along with the green crystals now shattering around the now broken Grovyle.

Diancie used Power Gem and began covering the Grovyle in a layer of Green Crystals. As he is covered, his mindset changes, his entire identity and reason changes. He? No, Crystal Drones don't have genders. Not until Mistress Diancie assigns them one. It stood up right, letting itself get transformed. As it was covered in head to toe in green crystals, Diancie spoke in a gentle voice. "Crystal Drone Grovyle, I know you don't even remember your previous life, but it doesn't matter anymore, you are my Crystal Drone, so obedient, so ready to help make more"

Crystal Drone Grovyle was ready for its next orders, listening intently to Mistress Diancie's commands. "You must hide and wait, hang out near the entrance of the forest with Crystal Drone Midnight Lycanroc, and be ready to ambush any new possible Crystal Drones~" she said with a hint of pride. Crystal Drone Grovyle only nodded "Yes Mistress Diancie" it droned, as both it and Crystal Drone Lycanroc went to their post. Diancie smirking to herself, happy with the quick pace of this one's conversion.

"Oh man oh man, the leader has been gone for DAYS!" the panicked Gallade exclaimed, as himself and the only other member of Team Blade left, Scyther walked towards the forest entrance. "He tried solo saving a Lycanroc, he probably is fighting another powerful grass pokemon, let's just run in, grab our leader, and Escape Orb out." Scyther said, pulling out an Escape Orb.

Once they stepped into the forest, both Crystal Drone Lycanroc and their former leader, Crystal Drone Grovyle blankly followed the pair until they were deep enough into the forest to be completely trapped, as they ready to pounce on the pair, the wind picks up like on that fateful night Leonardo, the leader was captured and crystalized.
