

"Open the cages let the experiments out, Alpha through beta! Theta isn't ready yet, code black!" a voice shouted from outside a small cell.

7712 looked up, the voice said Alpha and Beta units where to be released. She was one of three Alpha units, the only three left. Her cell door buzzed loudly and zipped open to a soldier in that annoying scratch proof skin, but he was different from the usual guards. His head was covered in a different helmet, this one had a human skull on its face, and his skin looked much thicker and heavier.

"Come on 7712, its time to test your combat effectiveness in a real situation, we are under attack, you and your units are to defend the compound. Do you understand?"

7712 nodded her furred head softly; she understood English but couldn't speak it. Her muzzle wasn't compatible and Joseph; her handler, hadn't taught her how to fully shift her form so that she could speak.

The guard wearing the scratch proof skin moved out of the door way and she slinked her way out of her room silently and paused in the hallway, not sure which way to go. She looked up at the guard, tilting her head questioningly.

"Down the hall that way, the other guards will let you out to deal with the threat." He seemed unusually calm, turning and walking casually down the hall, toward her training grounds.

7712 nodded and flew her way down the hall way, away from her usual training grounds. When she reached the gate, it was wide open, the guards dead. She paused and rolled over one of the bodies gently with a paw.

His face looked as though something had bitten it off, and his scratch proof armor was torn to shreds as though by a paw twice the size of her own. Feeling fear rise up in her gut, she turned over the other bodies and found the same.

7712 sat for a minuet thinking before she heard a loud scream from the direction of her cell, and one of her unit mates came scrambling around the corner, eyes wild with fear as something huge pounced on him, biting down on his neck, decapitating him instantly. It had a dog like face, and its shoulders where so wide that it filled the whole hallway.

7712 fought the fear down and fled out the gate, past more dead guards that had been ripped apart, their limbs scattered everywhere. She could smell the dog thing behind her chasing and gaining on her. A thought hit her and she slowed and used her claws to jump on to the walls, up the ceiling and dropped down onto the dogs back.

It immediately snarled and tried to buck her off, but she dug in her large claws into its back, and bit down fiercely into the back of its neck and shook her head as violently as she could.

The flesh was extremely tough but eventually tore away revealing the spine of the dog creature, and yet it did not stop trying to buck her off. She bit down on its spine, skillfully severing its spinal cord.

Its body went limp but its head continued to try to catch her as she leapt off and skittered away from its reach. The head continued to snap, bite and snarl at her slowing down with time before it just stared at her snarling.

"My pups will skin you ALIVE!!!" it suddenly roared at her.

Terrified at this sudden talent of speech from the dog creature, she skittered away as fast as she should.

After several corridors she finally found the last gate, wide open, gun damage to the gate apparent as she flew out the front doors and into the forest. She did not stop running; she kept going and going and going. Her legs spurred on by the creatures words.

"My pups will skin you alive."