

In the past, the previous president built a small port, which slowly boomed as more businesses signed contracts and workers arrived.

The port was made to the side since the previous city was overpopulated but became famous.

Millions of workers worked their hardest to build more towns for the people arriving from cruise ships to escape from the war and build railways for more goods to arrive.

But as the city was booming, something else in the growing town changed everything.

A husband who worked in the city and his wife had a baby, who was born in the town, noticed their son had sharp canines.

The discovery confused the happy couple, but they shrugged it off... until the baby was around two years old.

The wife stumbled upon her son transforming into an anthropomorphic boat and soon filled the baby's room, shocking the wife and causing her to faint.

The news about the baby's transformation spread like wildfire, causing millions of people to be confused about this sudden discovery, assuming that someone hallucinated and added it as a joke to spread rumors.

Oh, how much they were wrong.

Hundreds, millions, and trillions of babies were born with sharp canines and transformed into different vehicles, ranging from planes, boats, cars, and trains.

Confusion and fear racked the world like a swarm of bees, causing parents across the globe to wonder how their precious baby had this 'disease.'

Scientists gathered enough data they could from these babies, testing out many things and taking samples from those who have the 'ability.'

The scientists discovered a change in the baby's DNA, seeing random virus-like attachments on long DNA strands like jewelry.

So the scientists addressed the virus, the Iron Mutation Virus.

The parents sought doctors to help ‘fix’ the problem to return their precious baby to normal, fearing they would turn against them and destroy everything.

But trying to ‘remove’ the baby’s ability from them has proven difficult, causing the baby to die during the surgery or have damaging results.

There is no cure for this virus.

An organization formed during the years sought out every ‘vehishifter,’ either taking them away from their parents to an unknown place or killing them if transformed.

Over a million vehishifters, ranging from toddlers to young children, have been taken from their homes and disappeared from public or never returned.

Others abandoned their child if they were born with the Iron Mutation Virus, not wanting to raise a transforming monster.

However, half of the world accepted their babies as who they were, taking the chance of raising them as vehicles and humans.

But this caused separations, humans fighting against each other and blaming the vehishifters or directing at each other for the cause of producing said vehishifters.

Battles and protests happened worldwide, fighting against what is wrong and believing what is there to judge.

The battles and arguments continued for years until the president had enough of the conflicts and protests, seeing no change in trying to be ‘normal’ and damaging the human population.

The president gathered vehicles and humans to prevent all the chaos and damage, urging them to make peace with each other.

There was hesitation at first after the president begged, but they eventually signed the contract, agreeing to stop all battles and protests, even giving them rights.

The public was finally relieved from being war shocked and having their babies taken away from them... but the damage had already been done.

A good portion of the vehishifters had vanished while others took on jobs of doing what vehicles do, taking goods and delivering.

As time passed after the Incident of 1930, people slowly got used to these changes, but they still hated the virus and how it was treated.

The year is 2024, and the port is now a city called Bigg City Port, one of the world's most popular and largest ports.

Two companies had formed, one called Star Tug and Marine and the other called Zero Marine Bigg City.

However, there were few boats for the two companies to have contracts, with only some being seen and disappearing or replaced.

But one human discovered the reason after stumbling upon someone who works in one of the companies.
