

A white Focus was driving down a highway along with a large patch of trees on the right-hand side of the car.

They were in Ohio, where there are many trees and less land for people to have to live in peace.

Then, the car slowed down the pace and turned a corner to a park, driving in slowly.

The car stopped at an abandoned trail that leads deep into the forest on the other side of the park.

The back door of the car opened and a nervous young lady stepped out.

She has fair skin, steel-blue eyes, and long brown hair down to the middle of her back.

The lady is wearing a pair of black and blue glasses with round corners, and a blue cameo sweater, with frost color hems.

Underneath her sweater is a long sleeve blue shirt and wearing a pair of dark blue jeans.

She also has a pair of light purple and light blue shoes with white shoelaces.

"Stephanie, you are going to be fine." a voice replied from inside the car.

"Are you sure about that?" she nervously asked, glancing back at the car, pushing a strand of hair over her ear.

"Yeah, it's just a dare!" another voice replied, scoffing.

She glanced away from the car for a moment and glanced back.

"That means I have to survive only a week or more?" she asked, feeling nervous about being alone in a forest.

"Yes." another male's voice responded from the driver's seat.

"All you have to do is to follow that trail." she glanced over at the trail behind her back, looking nervous. "And the trail could lead you to the famous cabin in the middle of nowhere."

She mentally winced in worry at the words spoken from her friend.

The cabin used to belong to a famous creator that created creatures, that are over 10 ft tall!

But, then the creator snapped and created more and more, abusing them and misusing them along the way.

So, one of the creations had enough of him and... devoured him in one shot.

Now that the creator was out of the game, the creations went out into the opening and roamed the earth for many years.

Stephanie shook to herself in fear about the thought of getting captured by one of them or worse, killed by one of them on accident or purpose.

"Now, don't chicken out on this, Steph!" the female's voice replied, snapping her out of her daze. "Just call us through your phone after a day passes and tell us of how the progress is!"

She nervously nodded her head as she closed the door, mentally screaming at herself to chicken out.

But, she accepted the dare, so, she had to go through the dare without getting killed.

The car drove away from her and went on the highway, leaving the park with Stephanie, and no one else.

When the car left the park, she nervously whined to herself, turning towards the trail.

"Why did I decide to take the dare?" She whined to herself.

So, she stepped forward into the forest, heading towards the cabin that created the creatures.

After a few or more hours have passed, nighttime arrived early, creating the sky in a light peach color with streaks of orange and yellow.

Stephanie was getting nervous as she continued walking down the trail.

Did she go the wrong way?

She panicked and frantically glanced around, looking for a billboard that has a map.

But, all she sees is greenery and trees blocking her view as she searched.

Suddenly, a growl growled from behind her back, and she froze in her spot.

Slowly, she glanced around at where the noise is coming from, only to see a pair of glowing gold eyes, glaring at her.

Instantly, the instincts to run activated, so she ran, not even noticing she ran off the trail that leads to the cabin.

She ran deeper into the woods, running away from the being that growled at her.

Noticing she was not followed from behind, she glanced over her shoulder to see if the creature was following her until she went into something cloth.

After going into the cloth, she fell backward and landed back first on the grass, rubbing the side of her head.

She glanced up at what she went into, only to freeze at what she saw, shaking from head to toe.

Staring down at her was a giant black figure.