

There were eight children were playing around in the park as they smiled happy and filled the air with cheerful laughter. Four boys were playing a game called Tag as the three of them would run away from the boy who was 'it'. Three of the girls swung on the swings as they swayed back and forth through the air. The last girl, who wasn't engaged in activity with the others, had her own idea of what to do for fun. She was going to play a little prank on all the kids and laugh at their reactions. The girl proceeded to do the first step of her plan by crawling underneath the small cluster of bushes.

The leaves and twigs brushed at her as she moved through them. One of them even got snagged in her hair that the girl had to pull it out. When she got to her perfect hiding spot in the center of the bushes, the girl spotted a strange cyan crystalline object. It was small-sized, about 5 inches in height, and it was in a form of a goblin. "Huh? Who left this here?" the girl wondered as she was intrigued with the object. Taking an interest to the small figurine, the girl crawled over to it and picked it up into her hand. She gazed at its wonderful naturalistic details and thought, 'Wow! I always knew goblins were ugly creatures, but this thing here is the best one I've ever seen. It's so pretty, it shames all the other goblin species even more!' She made an amuse grin on her face as imagined showing the monsters the crystal figurine and then taunting about how they look ugly compared to this, arousing jealousy out of them. She giggled at her daydream for a short bit until the figurine started to glow with light. The girl opened her mouth in surprise and murmured, "Huh?"

Suddenly, the figurine's blue light engulfed the girl and started working its transformation magic on her. Her arms became black and metallic with her hands transformed into big balls with short circular stubs on them. Her clothes disappeared and her legs turned black with her feet turning green and black wheels appearing underneath the feet. Her skin became green and her mouth unhinged itself to become a circle with a big hole going through the body. Her teeth became fangs and a black horned cap replaced her hair. "What the?!" the girl gasped as she looked at her arms and legs in shock to discover that she has just transformed into a goblin. "Oh my gosh, I'm a monster! What do I do? I don't want to look like this! Everybody's going to say I'm ugly!" the goblin whined. Now she wished she hadn't touched that goblin-like object because what if she stays like this forever? Being a butt-ugly monster was one of the last things the girl wanted in this world. "I wish I was cute little me again right now," she said to herself. Then suddenly, the blue light engulfed the goblin and transformed her back into a human.

The girl looked at reverted self in amazement and said, "Wow that was quick!" She then realized that the mysterious object she had the power to transform her into a goblin and back into a human at any time. She wondered if it could also turn her into other monsters as well. She decided to test out her theory by imagining herself as a gremlin. Just as she predicted, the girl changed into that monster as she became a little smaller with her arms turning into gray wings, eyes turning round and crimson, her clothes replaced by a white poncho, and her body round and white. Then she tried the figurine's power again by wanting to be a mini flan. The girl was now a round red gooey head with a stem and a pair of leaves at the top. Finally knowing exactly what the figurine does, the mini flan smiled mischievously as she thought, 'You know what? Forget about my earlier plan. I can make a bigger prank using this thing here. It's time to start a scare fest all over town!'

The woman, who was the children's caretaker and chaperone, looked at her wristwatch and saw that it was time to leave. She got off of the bench she was sitting on and called to the children, "Alright kids, playtime's over! It's time to go and get something to eat." The children stopped playing went to crowd around the woman who counted each of them and see who was with her. The only one missing was that girl who crawled into the bushes out of everyone's sight. The curly blonde-haired woman looked around for her as she asked, "Now where could she be?" Suddenly a svarog flew out of the bushes and let out a shrieking roar that terrified the woman and children. "Everybody, run to the van now!" the woman told the kids.

The children started running away as fast as they could while screaming in fright. "Monster, monster, monster!" they all cried.

The woman stayed behind to look for that missing girl as she tried calling out her name a few times before asking, "Where are you?!" Then the svarog started flying towards the woman with its jaws open to bite at her. Terrified out of her wits at the monster coming to eat her, the woman abandoned her search for the girl and ran away screaming to the van. She took out her car keys and unlocked the van to let herself and the children get inside quickly before the svarog got to them.

After the van drove away and flew into the air, the wyvern monster burst out laughing and said, "Look at them go! Running away like frightened mice with their tails between their legs. Tee hee hee!" The svarog transformed back into a little girl and she continued saying, "Having this crystal thing here sure is best thing I've have in my life. It'll be fun changing into different monsters and scaring the life out of people. I bet it'll even be useful for all the pranks I pull." She changed herself into a hedge frog and hopped away as she said mischievously, "Now time to go find a random sucker to scare and mess with."