

After the ordeal of FPS Guild's Roy Knight intercepted a UAC Facility on Earth. The UAC's Pokémon unit opened an abandoned facility in an unnamed planet in the PMD Multiverse. The facility is situated near a mountain range and was used before by humans before the Pokemon takeover after the mutated pokerus made them sentient.

UAC found this facility and reused it, experimented on new tools especially upgrades to the quantum accelerators (the same ones used during the Plutonia Experiment) to close any hell gate faster. Demons eyed their focus on Pokemon and the research direly, a gate opens unleashing demonic hordes within the facility, but the invasion was quelled, and the quantum accelerator worked perfectly, shutting down the hell gate.

As research continued more boldly, the CEO of the facility Mateo Sims, before he went on to reuse the facility, he scrounged notes of previous UAC experiments on Mars and its moons along with its Pokémon unit. He went into a particular interest on the Doom Absol, Roy Knight himself, not just him, Roy's old team before the FPS Guild was born. The Table of Arceus' Judgement.

The documents, dubbed the Mateo Files, contain various information of Argent and Sentinel Pokemon but most of it were damaged following the demonic invasion of the 2 Argent Pokemon worlds alongside the destruction of secret UAC facilities in them, Mateo Sims kept the files in his personnel office which used to be an armory renovated for him, occasionally he tried to digitally remake them but to no avail. He also kept the coffins, containing all the members of the Table of Arceus' Judgement within various parts of the labs.

The next day after the first hell gate opened in the UAC Pokemon facility, 7 hell gates opened and swarmed the facility, slaughtering everyone inside and as well zombifying many other dead personnel. The quantum accelerators closed only 6 hell gates and because the facility was overwhelmed by the demonic horde, they were not able to close the last one in time, the gate stayed open with a Gatekeeper guarding it. Other surviving personnel barricaded themselves or hidden within the darkness of the labs.

A Lazarus Wave beamed up the sky like a beacon, catching the attention of many Pokemon. Mistaking it for the return of Shadow Pokemon, many explorer teams and guilds went into the route leading into the mountains

However, they became victims like the UAC scientists and security staff, it was clear that the explorers are underprepared for the situation. One of the scientists tried to warn the explorers who first went in, but it was too late.

The Lazarus Wave also caught the attention of the FPS Guild, most especially Roy Knight who holds a grudge against UAC for their experiments as they are indirectly responsible for leading the demons into his homeworld, killing all his people and as well directly responsible for heinous experiments on Argent and Sentinel Pokemon.

Mateo about to lose hope, awakens the Table of Arceus' Judgement as a desperate attempt to close the Hell gate. Acrux Morse finding that Roy was alive, psychically contacts the Doom Absol, much to Roy's surprise.

Along the way, the Table meets surviving explorers, including Mateo. The Table destroyed the Hell gate and killed the Icon of Sin that was guarding it, with the help of surviving explorers and Mateo.

They left the crumbling facility with Roy promising the survivors that they will pay their medical bills after their sessions with therapy. Mateo Sims is the only human survivor and claimed responsibility for the chaos, he was detained by Pokemon for questioning.

The Table of Arceus' Judgement after accepting that their people are dead, later joined the FPS Guild alongside taking the Mateo Files with them.