

Amelia had successfully made an advance on her invention: the condom was had the internal space of twenty universes. To test it, she had decided to employ a non-hyper Pokemon who had a capacity that was just below par with hypers - a Monferno by the name of Six.

Six had came to Amelia for help with a recent dilemma of his - his increasing production. First befriended by Pyren, he was brought before her for Amelia to use a resistance spell on, so that he would produce less. The result was drastically different - he produced far more. A more powerful spell of the same type was tried, and again the same results. Wearing the condom herself, Amelia absorbed a full orgasm from Six into her loins, including the gallons of precum he leaked. When she released herself from the condom, her balls contained enough cum to be bigger than the house. Six was productive as a hyper thanks to Amelia!

So, Amelia came up with a more simplistic solution - give him her interdimensional condom to wear. It would work as a win for both sides - Amelia would get someone to test her new product, and Six would have a way to contain his orgasmic poweress.

Amelia was surprised by Six as she got to know him. For as sexually powerful of a Pokemon he was, he was surprisingly modest about it. In fact, he frequently apologized to Pyren and Amelia when he leaked all over their floors (a spell over the house made clean-up easy). Apparently the Monferno would leak quarts of precum at a time from even the slightest hint of arousal.

She was foolish though, forgetting her resistance magic was still in place on the Monferno's endowments. It caused a malfunction in her condom, reducing its capacity by almost 100%. When Six returned to report this, she came up with another idea to solve his problem and decided to take the interdimensional condom back. The Monferno had done his job - she knew where to improve on the device from here.