

So Artemis and Solaris had become a duo of sorts, with a crossover show that they did between both of their fan bases.

The other wolves had been VIP people who had access to the backstage area and were in the VIP area in the crowd.

The concert itself was rather basic, the band behind them with somewhat normal outfits with the Jumbotron behind them showing the twins up close through a camera feed.

The show was awesome, it was the first time either one of them had performed in a while, and the fans were hyped because of that.

After the show had ended the heroes of gaia had walked across the street from the concert venue to grab some pizza and sodas.

However a mysterious wolf wearing a trench coat jacket with his head covered in a hoodie seemingly follows the wolves around from place to place.