

So at the Opal City Beast Fighting stadium the biggest record labels on the planet decided to have a free indoor concert with the roof closed with the heater on in the stadium for people to warm up to.

Once the wind that Solaris and Artemis was going to be heard the stadium did fill up, and other musical artists had also shown up alongside them to finish singing their parts of solaris's song.

Then to finish off the performance they did a super bowl inspired performance to really get everyone excited before the show was over for them but everyone had stayed in the stands as other smaller singers and performers showed up with some minor league beast fighters.

One thing to note is that there was a family of moose siblings in the stands with their elderly relatives.
