

The heroes of Gaia had returned back to their old stomping ground, and created a magic gateway, a portal so that anyone could use it to teleport back to earth.

They also had packed up much of the things like some couches tables and other things that were still left there to be sorted out. Really they moved it to the moonstone basement so that the said things to be sorted out for later on.

Once the gateway was properly set up and the actual door to the temple was shut Artemis had walked around one last time before teleporting back to his homeworld after turning off the lights and locking up.

Some time later two Gaian guards had shown up along with two more through the portal to guard the place so that no one or thing could break in and get back to the Gaian homeworld