

Jake had moved into the dorm officially and had started training along with the others in the mirror dream world.

It was also discovered that the four team members could use their elemental auras to fight with electricity strength ice and water respectively.

They also introduced Jake, one of the heroes to the Hart royal family, and revealed that they are calling themselves the dream fighters, a group of high school kids dedicated to saving the world.

While the good news is that there was a new teammate, Callum was starting to question if he was well alive or not as he woke up in the dream world and had been lingering around the dream castle ever since.
