

So it appears that this time around two people had gone missing.

Henry Black an average Joe, a 5'6 Ferret with brown hair and eyes with a normal coat for his fur. He was known to be the shy timid loner but is rather smart and observant.

He came from a working class family with 6 brothers and sisters. He is fairly average and was bullied a bit growing up but got over the bullying once getting into high school.

And as for the other person, James the pro gamer player is the 5'7 chubby white mouse with black hair and blue eyes, he is the extroverted hyper and energetic type and is known to be very optimistic as well.

From his past, he came from a normal family and he is working hard to develop a streaming career much to his friends parents and siblings annoyance.

Callum had located the new area that had popped up: the Garden of Numbness, a place that went 12 floors deep.

The Team had done their thing yet again, and had taken down their shadows of Henry and James.

Henry's appearance had changed to a White cloak with a moon shaped pendant holding it together, with a light grey bodysuit under it with the inside of the cloak having stars and planets on the inside of it. Helps the team with Navi skills, and has a grey aura tied to him with psychic powers.

As for James, he Wears a power ranger inspired Green outfit with a visor and all and uses spears to fight with a grassy dark green aura tied to him.

Afterwards James and Henry joined the team and Henry took the role as Navigator and had also taken the information from Callum's notebook and used it to help him put together a solid picture of the dream world from it's light side.

However Callum had his own internal struggle, he did not know his past or where he came from and sort of had his own problem of not being useful.