

The problem is that Henry could not locate Callum properly but was sensing something in the Dreamstalk like someone had been thrown into the dream world.

With some hesitancy the team headed to the Dreamstalk to figure out what Henry sensed.

Turns out it was their darker counterparts the Knights of darkness.

While now they were fully visible the two teams had a battle to settle their differences with some hesitancy from the knights.

But with a tag team victory the dream fighters had won against them and they had scattered.

"it looked like they did not want to fight..."

"Oh well they attacked us for the first last time, considering that to be payback on our part..."

Henry then noted that he was able to feel another presence back at Twisted Manor and sort of felt like Callum.

The team then headed back to where they were before but this time the manor looked to be lit up and active with shadow monsters roaming it.

"He has to be here, let's go guys..." George had said as the others were following him.