

The kings of gaia have formally given the title of Guardians of magic to the core nine members, with Brian being the de facto leader of it semi-officially.

They were also given the roles of being the official leaders in training regarding their own elemental magic styles, and the formation of their beast forms but like his predecessor Brian was still struggling at his powers and was only able to create flowers and some vines.

It was also at this time Brian would truly awaken to his powers being able to create magic trees that sprouted from the ground before fading away into petals purely out of random.

Lastly Brian had fully embraced the role given to him by King Artemis, in which he was starting to see a father like relationship with him.
