

When I woke up We were in the dreamworld castle on the light side as apparently my team passed out near the actual castle itself.

The Queen as we were told to be this evil person was very patient and caring and actually healed us completely.

Her Children, the Prince and the two princesses were so kind and helpful to us despite what we had done and were sort of thrown out of the king of nightmare's castle.

We then were speaking with the Queen before we ran into our adversaries. The people we had chased off from the light dream stalk a long time ago with more people on their side showed up.

They had readied their powers to well eliminate us but I was desperately trying to explain what had happened.

"George... Hear them out"

I had explained what happened properly and how basically had been manipulated to do the dark king's bidding and how we were sort of trusted that role unto us.

The Queen with her children were standing in the middle of the both of them trying to serve to be a mediator between the two groups, and she did try her best as we were trying to talk things over.

"I believe that if the two of you team up you can take him down...." The Queen had said "I know it won't be easy but we all have to put aside our personal differences for the greater good.."

The Queen was right and everyone on my side had seemed to have the same idea come over them.

Me and George, the leader of his team, shook hands. We were both reluctant but agreed to save the world from the King's plans.