

Artemis and Dakota had their beast battle in which it was fire vs grass, not a very good match up, but Artemis had been training for a while and was much stronger than any of his friends expected him to be.

Artemis at the start of the match threw up vines from the ground to fight with, and Dakota easily burned them.

The whole match is generally like this but Artemis throws out his wildcard, he was planting seeds over the turf and at the end of the fight before the beast forms get sent out.

There was a huge grass explosion that turned the field into a magical forest, and Dakota was at a disadvantage as if he burned anything the whole forest could burn down.

Eventually the forest moved to be this huge glass regeneration titan, and with how much Dakota burned it kept regenerating and Artemis was able to take down Dakota without breaking much of a sweat without using his beast form.
