

FivebyFive:

Aletica's Quest: #1. Her Quest Begins

by Xenny Diemes

In the far off lands of Gyrausla, the lands are dominated by various races of dragons that roam the world and claim it as their own. Sure there are scores of other races including griffins, orcs, therian beasts of lore and minotaurs running about, but dragons are the dominant species on this planet three to one. Into our tale, we go into the large cottage of Aletica, a sorceress and warrior of the Quezalmath clan, one of the younger formed clans of warriors ever around on this world. Aletica is known for many things, her strength of both mind and body in the face of deep hardships, her vital knowledge of the magic types that are dominant all across Gyrausla and mostly because of her...

...massive bustline.

She didn't gain those massive mammaries through magic, it was purely the result of having the generations of nursing and breeding dragons in her clan in years past finally explode in her later years. Not wanting to dove on letting her bust get in the way of what she really wanted she studied hard in the mystical arts and sorcery while in the parallel kick some hard ass in the arena going up against moderate and even high level warriors even bigger than her. Half the time she really hones in her skill with claw and blade to cut down her opponents, the other half is pure cheating with a simple boob flash and the seconds the opponent wastes in staring, Aletica gains in defeating them.

One day while walking in the village grounds a lone rider on his two-legged steed rushed into the grounds like lighting as he spots the large busty dragon near the fruit stand. Stopping in front of her presence, Aletica draws out her sword ready to attack if the rider tries anything that would warrant her deadly moves but that is not the original intent of why he is here. Pulling out from his pouch is a large scroll he handed to Aletica and important instructions to go with it. It was from his long lost lover Adelen who the two have been courting for years but left in order to fight a conflict on the other side of the world. The instructions talked allowed that she must meet with Master Rauthal in the Grey Meadows at midnight. When asked why, the rider is not at liberty to say but a quick pullout of her blade aimed at his neck would make him answer very quickly. He honestly didn't know and is told to tell her to meet with Master Rauthal at midnight. Letting him go to ride off all she has in her hand is the scroll and the uncertainty of finding her lover.

It's midnight and after a grueling long walk to get through Grey Meadows, Aletica finally meets the one the rider calls Master Rauthal. he is a small old orc who owns a large library of tools, scrolls and and weapons only the strong and willful can handle but first the warrior sorceress has to store the severe amount of reservation to not kill the orc who is mistakenly grabbing her breasts and confusing them for the melons out in his garden and saying they've over-ripen. After a few hours to recover from his mini-coma Master Rauthal awakens to see Aletica with the scroll in her hand. Grabbing it, he reads the contents and is shocked to learn of the details before burning it with his hand. Aletica needs to know what has happened but Rauthal sternly orders Aletica to go home as she has done her job which by her is stupid because if that was the case why would the rider give her the scroll and not to him directly. But Rauthal now commands her to leave or else.

This puts the orc in a dangerous position as she is talking to a more powerful sorceress than he is. Towering over him with her great bust and the sound of cracking knuckles, she's giving him an ultimatum because she's now involved and if Rauthal says no, he'll have the choice of being beaten to a pulp or destroyed by her own magic and will get the message out herself. After yielding to her demands Rauthal gives what she demands: It is from her lover and the instructions were to give the scroll to him so he can supply her with all that she needs to come get him. But being the sexist lout that he is, Raulthal thought he can send her away and he become the hero since they are close friends. Aletica tells him if he really is Aleden's friend, he would trust her with his safe return. In which he complies and follows the methods as written in the scroll that was to be delivered to him. Soon enough she has gotten her supplies and her weapons which includes, a really big sword for someone of her 'caliber' to handle very well. Mounted on her very own mighty two-legged beast Aletica rides off into the night and her quest begins to find Aleden and bring him home.

To Be Continued.