

FivebyFive:

Saiebeaius: #5. Godslayer

by Xenny Diemes

Azan is the first to explain to the still angrily pumped titan who has pulled her away from delivering the death blow to Terberus. Saiebeaius flexes her sinew even more that the sound of her clothes creaking under the stress to display her rage. Azan silences her with his booming voice to get her attention and dare not to speak in that tone again. Saie cowers but regains her composure again to demand why she is she taken away and who he and they are, if they don't answer, she will beat the boat of the into a bloody paste. Azan feels regret to hold back for such insolence and is ready to smite the ungrateful creature. Saurel steps in and angrily orders her husband to stand down leaving him to eventually relent.

Saurel looks on to Saie and with a calm smile, apologizes for her father's anger. Hearing those words only adds confusion in her mind adding more to why did she say such a thing. Saurel reveals to Saie that she and Azan are her real parents. Saie resists the idea for feeling that it's a trick pulled by the emperor to let her guard down. Saurel shows a window of Terberus staggering around after realizing that the woman who was about to kill him has just vanished. Saurel knows that such a feeble creature can never harm the offspring of a pure goddess. Saie wants to know and Saurel does much to the chagrin of her husband. Through visions of her birth all the way to the present, Saie was given visions of everything that has happened. Her conception was passed down to the mortal known as Queen Uysa. Being left in the snow and then raised by her adopted mother without any clue of her real purpose in life. Azan knew that it can be any time that he could have taken her away from those mortals, wipe them all out and get her to work on her real task.

Hearing those words didn't bode well with the titan wolf. Like a flash of Lightning she threw a powerful blow to the higher god. Sending his massive frame through a column. That is the force a god would deliver to another, Azan lies unconscious and Saie looks to Saurel in anger believing if she had those same thoughts as well but even in the face of her wrath, Saurel remains calm because in her frankness she's been meaning to do that herself ever since the lower gods humiliated him since the cataclysm. Saie learns of the event that made the world she knew what it is. Arrogant mortals moving their attention away from the glory of the gods they once worshipped and now after the destruction, the gods themselves became rebellious and prideful of their labor. Eventually they along with the other higher gods tried to retaliate but were defeated among them, Azan. Saurel then radically changes her attitude to Saie as she gives her daughter a choice. Either she does her duty or die by her own hand which is far worse than what Azan has in store.

Seeing that there was no choice in the matter, Saiebeaius takes up to the task and it was simple. All she had to do was to come down to the realm of the lower gods and slay them all. As Saie descends, the lower gods, bathed in their own arrogance for days past in their own power were about to get a brutally, rude awakening as the ground shakes and the sight of a huge-chested, over-muscled titan who is pissed from a series of events and as she made her hard landing on the solid marble floor and cracking it with her own mass. What followed next, filled the ears of the mighty higher god as he comes up and meets Saurel in what can be described as a total bloodbath. The sadistic joy of watching their daughter engaging in deicide. No god was spared by her, from the tiniest clever type to the giant whose mighty mallet was stopped by just her fists. In the end there were no survivors.

Back in the mortal realm Terberus gathers himself as he believes he is spared the horror of that woman's brutality but soon as he leaves the throne room, what he saw widen his eyes and drop his jaw in horror as the skies are red and rain down blood from the gods over the great empire. It was too much for the evil emperor to handle and as he runs back he bumps over to a blood-soaked Saie with muscles fully flexed and gum-exposed snarl facing down at him. His cowardly screams soon silenced by the sound of his own body crushed to oblivion by her own might and thrown over the balcony thousands of feet below. Saie approaches the balcony to scream at the heavens her declaration to be guardian of this world. She will face the dangers this world and the Higher gods for her vengeful rebellion, for Saiebeaius titan, warrior and now godslayer, the dangers will never get a chance.

The End