

Avataress Trilogy:

Origins and Secrets

4. Revelations Among Gods

June grew worried at the presence of the giant wolfess but before she can utter a word, the woman grabbed June by the face and slammed her against the mirror silencing her unless she wants her head crushed under her hand. Struggling to breathe and beating on the muscled forearm the wolfess smiles at June's pathetic attempt to break free from her grip. Until June's arms instantly buff up and grabs the arm off of her face. Not flinching at the incredible strength this mortal is displaying talking in the voice of Fortitunus through her, she is furious for her action and grabs her arm demanding that they should talk. The two in a burst of speed crash through the ceiling and out of the roof of her house and rocketed to the mountains to prevent hurting more mortals.

Arriving at the nearest range, Fortitunus throws down the wolfess hard and completes her transformation into Avataress with her costume on in front of her. Fortitunus subconsciously comforts June hoping that she is alright but the wolfess just laughs at how the mortal look when she smashed her face in. Fortitunus didn't think so and angrily looks at the wolfess. She knows that the form is devoid of a host soul for she has evicted hers recently. June through Avataress needs to know who is this woman, and she introduces herself as Equitas, goddess of balance or in this case, was.

She looks around inspecting Fortitunus's new body and is impressed at how packed with more muscle and bigger breasts than hers. Things Equitas are getting used to along with the muscle she gained, even impressed with her costume. Insulting her if her mortal friend gave her the idea. Fortitunus wasn't one for talk but reason why she's here on Earth. Equitas was shocked to see that she can't see her little sister hoping she finds a body before she dies. It didn't take too much to find hers and consume the soul it once inhabited. Before taking the body, the previous inhabitant was an impressionable young model just getting ready for a show. When Equitas took her body she didn't put up much of a fight and when she got bored, slaughtered everyone in the event with no survivors, taking out a few cop cars along the way. June is horrified at her act but Fortitunus wasn't for Equitas does these things that never makes her suited to be a force of balance to just go into killing lower beings. She also knows Equitas couldn't develop the body with that much muscle on her own.

Her explanation is the very reason why she's on Earth in the first place. While searching for her, she felt the presence of her power being used on that planet. She really couldn't do anything until she got a body, after that she visited the bull Fortitunus pumped up and after killing her ladies, took all of his muscles until he was nothing more than a living skeleton. She poses in front of Fortitunus admiring her work believing that these new muscles look better on her than they do on the bull even playfully flexed her pecs to bounce her new bare breasts in front of her just for kicks. June angered at the idea of committing these acts fuels the idea why Fortitunus wants out of June's body now.

Equitas scoffs like it was a big deal. An angry June does make it a big deal in which Equitas doesn't care and asks Fortitunus to just kill the soul so they can leave this world and meet the others or else Ultimus gets mad. Fortitunus towers over her big sister and refuses to go anywhere. Equitas just smiles thinking that its cute but has no time for her petty defiance and asks again to come with her or else she'll start killing everyone on this planet before killing June. Fortitunus still refuses. Then Equitas talks to June through the form telling her a little story about Fortitunus other than what she knows so far in a way that mortals can understand. During the Eon Wars, the various gods began to fight for superiority over the universes. Equitas and her brothers and younger sister Fortitunus were all participants in the war for their survival. Only with her power can her siblings gain the superior advantage and end this war but instead, she just ran away like a coward.

When the war ended it was soon realized that all of the gods were going through an unknown phenomena where they can't survive long without an avatar body seeing the gods die out one by one to rather die with their egos important than their reason to live. to rule over the mortals and guide their fate as they see fit. She doesn't know about how the other siblings are doing but is happy to see Fortitunus got her body, how she managed to keep her soul to even talk to her is something Equitas can fix. To let her destroy this pest and join her siblings in the great beyond so they can regain their rightful place. But Fortitunus refuses to leave anywhere and threatens to hurt her if she goes near June. Equitas was now shocked to see her little sister act this way and tells her to stop acting like this and let her destroy her host soul.

Fortitunus grabs Equitas and holds her from behind. Telling her firmly and hoping it gets through her thick, corrupted head that if she wants to keep her body and her life she will leave this planet and its people alone meaning it after feeling June's reaction to her killing innocents. Equitas repels her sister and slams her into the ground. It was her turn to talk down to her and throws punches across her face demanding if this pest of a mortal put her up to this. Mad that she has defied her, angry that she ran away in the heat of battle and furious beyond rage for a mortal to give her a nickname just by reading into her mind. Grabbing her fist Fortitunus got up while Equitas struggles to move against her towering might and tells her that only June can call her "Fortie" and throws a mean punch that sends her body deep into a mountain. While she's still out Fortitunus tells June that what she says is true, she did run away but it was never because of cowardice.

June was able to listen but doesn't know what to believe after learning the truth of why she really possessed her. She ran away from the Eon Wars because it didn't make any sense to her from the start. More and more gods killing each other and then her siblings who for eons have used her for her strength and power now wants it more so to give them a winning edge but refused to do it. June asked why but even Fortitunus doesn't know but she seriously doesn't want to fight and for her original reason to possess her body she was glad June did put up a fight otherwise she wouldn't see any worth for mortals. Everything June told her about what Ultravixen stood for was in her to resist a possession of a god for this long to co-exist with her when a weaker being could have easily taken over like Equitas.

Spending the day with her made her change her attitude about how the mortals interact to the point of jealousy compared to how her siblings treat her. Even the times being Avataress shows what it means to have a reason to fight as much as she now wants to fight to protect her host and her friend. Wanting to feel more like Ultravixen and more like June if she can just give her a chance. June looked cold at Fortitunus's plea and then later tells the god if she really means it, then that it's not being a coward it's being brave to what she believes is right. But their little moment is shattered with Equitas gaining the strength to lift a massive boulder and throws it at nearly ten times the speed of sound. Fortitunus shields herself and takes the full hit of the boulder. Exploding to pieces around her but not leaving a single scratch on her body. She is fine but the boulder was just a distraction for a full melee attack from her sister starting with a deadly blow to the stomach.

Fortitunus knows that a fight on Earth is too dangerous and takes it up to space tempting for her sister to chase after her. As the two fight, they exchange insults and truths at each other. Fortitunus tells her that the sister she long knew is dead when she fought in that war. After the fighting she no longer stood for balance but for death and destruction. She looked up to her to find the right path but it was now all in vain. Equitas started to hate Fortitunus for being given the luxury to run while she had no choice and to let mortals play her along like some pet when she should have ruled over them like a queen, why does she have any purpose to start loving mortals. Fortitunus's answer while she grabs her hair is that she has never know what its like to be one delivering a massive punch that sends Equitas body and slam into a giant planetoid causing it to crack with massive fissures. Landing on the surface, Fortitunus and June as one look around the impact site and finds the center hole.

Peering over the hole the two wondered if she is really down, then a clawed hand came out and phased into her torso. June screamed in agony as the hand grabs her and crushes her slowly Fortitunus screams out June's name as she can feel her life force being pulled away from her. Equitas laughed maniacally while she's doing this and tells her that this mortal has impaired her better judgement and big sis' will make it all better. Grabbing her by the face and arm Fortitunus gains all the strength she can muster to get her grip off of June. It was becoming too much for the both of them until the most miraculous thing happened. In her agony June is becoming more in one with Fortitunus's power Equitas mad power was turning into fear when the two began to talk as one and in a sharp moment of pure, unbridled power, breaks Equitas' arm.

Howling in pain the mind of the corrupt goddess of balance is blown from such a feeling but can't let that stop her from coming at them with the other arm. But the two stopped her from throwing it, They wondered that she wouldn't be like this if they actually worked together. All of Equitas's own strength through her new body and muscles were useless without the actual know-how and use for she was too busy either ruling or killing and she's going to pay for killing those people and the soul she took this body from. Equitas pulling her new tail between her legs strangely now begs Fortitunus for forgiveness. Now seeing a shift in attitude Fortitunus and June now as one can see Equitas has changed indeed raising their arms as they formed a massive ball of energy, brighter than the sun and just as powerful but shifted into a dark form of energy. Equitas knows that type of ability is used to kill gods and now pleas with her sister to not kill her. Seeing that she has no other option she would rather go down killing her than run away. Screaming at full force with her one good arm, Equitas charges at the avatar shouting that she will not be taken down.

But they are not as separate beings they will now as one, Aiming the sphere at the charging muscle wolffess they shout "We... Are... Avataress!" and fire. Shouting in agony the goddess and her avatar body are burned alive as they are pushed back into the fissured planetoid her last words before colliding into the rock were cries for help to the other great gods before finally being vaporized upon impacting and exploding the planetoid to oblivion. Landing back on Earth Avataress can feel her two consciousness becoming separate again. Both June and Fortitunus had little memory of what has happened but looking at the firely aftermath of the destroyed planetoid she knows that her sister is no more.

June felt totally different like Fortie did to feel the true raw power of a god guiding that arm to break herself free and the mortality and feelings of a mortal to understand and give a higher purpose to fight for the weak the two actually felt what it's like to be a true avatar. Landing near the house June became a little impressed at how her friend got better at landing on her feet. Then two strangers came out and were taken aback by the sight of the towering vixen. One of them recognizes them as the super fox from the news who saved the village but why she would come by their home was unknown but they look frightened and worried. June knows who they are and breaks her identity by taking through the avatar. It was June's parents. Suspecting their daughter had been kidnapped in the midst of the disasters earlier.

June and Fortitunus explained to them what has happened and they are having a hard time taking it all in also upset at Fortitunus for doing such a thing resorting to calling her a monster but June defended her by knowing the whole idea was wrong and she saved her from the grips of another god who wanted to kill everyone for kicks.

Fortitunus realizes that before they destroyed Equitas she called out to the other gods for help, once they discover what they have done they will come and kill her even if it means destroying hundreds of worlds including Earth if they have to. The goddess warns them that unless she fights them, their daughter and the universe will never be safe. June didn't like the idea ether but she can't let the Earth be in danger leaving her with no alternative but to let them come after her and take them down even Ultimus. June's parents don't want her to go but can't see any alternative that they are together. Fortitunus apologizes to June and her parents and hopes they are not near Earth. Bending down to their level and hoping she doesn't crush them June through the avatar body gives them one last hug before becoming one as Avataress again telling them that she loves them.

Flying off into space, Avataress sheds a single tear. Fortitunus can feel the emotion through June knowing what she did is wrong and hopes after all of it is over with the other gods she can make things right. For the strength goddess needs June's strength to through what can be hell.
