

Wolfy See, Wolfy Do

by Xenny Diemes

The sun rises over the large glass balcony doors inside the large high-rise where Xendrian lives and Mnemosyne is the first to wake up to take in all those rays, Walking to see her fellow roommate Ollie still sleeping on his back hard. Its understandable because he had a really long free roam last night. As she looks at the digital clock, her drowsiness turns into total jubilation and excitement. Today's the day their master is coming home!

Being an Interrealm officer, missions take days, weeks or even months at a time and that includes all the risks that come with it. So far to the two wild werewolves, this has been the longest yet, a month has passed and not once they heard from Xendrian. They though had nothing to worry about up until now because they are well fed through robotic assistants and allowed their free roam through their collars. To Xendrian, he cares for them very much and it was worth the combined 300 hours to train them for that right. Mnemosyne loves her free roams where she can explore more of her new home and meet other free creatures to meet. But overtime she misses those times all three have together including the time she shoved the blue dragon into the bathtub to avoid taking a bath. It was the closest thing to be being a family since she was saved from the fate of those deadly fights.

To occupy her time while master comes, she watches a lot of TV and is fascinated with a lot of the strange programs that are on and often likes to imitate them which often caused some damage to the apartment but she means well, the girl is a very impressionable type. One program Mnemosyne sees is the fitness shows on TV showing men and women of different species showing off their powerful bodies and muscles, the kind that she had, just not as big as they are. She soon starts to imitate the bodybuilding techniques like the people on TV does and before she starts to lift something heavy the dual elevator doors open and in a burst of joy, Mnemosyne runs on all fours and rush to the main hall where Xendrian is and leaps on top of him along with Ollie. Both are finally happy to see him home after so long!

Getting up after a long bout of “kisses”, Xendrian apologizes to the two for being gone for so long. Keeping the multiverse safe from dangerous threats never end on a short note. As the three come out of the all, he sees that everything is in order and nothing is broken this time, he stopped by the neighbors first to see if they’ve behaved well during his leave. They did. With that in mind, he brought some gifts, for Ollie he gets a new smash down chew toy and for Mnemosyne, it’s the equivalent of fancy jewelry. A studded collar made with pure Andenocite crystals. On Prime Earth, they are extremely rare and costs millions of dollars, but from his assigned dimension, those crystals are as abundant as water and therefore far cheaper to make them into a fashionable collar and helps her put it on. To add on to the pleasure of having him back it would be great for all of them to go out for a walk down to the park.

At the park, the three have a good walk around especially with other owners walking their exotic creatures down and around. After nearly three miles, Xendrian stops the two and needs to take a quick rest which accidentally became a deep sleep on the bench for both him and Ollie. Mnemosyne wasn’t sleepy but is bored out of her mind until her eye caught the view of a local gym that she sees in one of the ads on TV. Sneaking off to not disturb Xen and Ollie, she walks off with her collar and leash and goes right into the Gym walking past a patron who just scanned in. It is a sight to behold to her seeing various men and women exercising and pumping iron to keep fit. Mnemosyne just got all too eager to try any one of the equipment out. Just like the bodybuilders on TV, she did multiple reps with various weights and moves them to the impression of others. Even a certain werewolf who also spotted her working out. This alpha doesn’t notice that she is a feral werewolf that is unable to talk, and puts off as being the strong and silent type. But Mnema’s imitations make it hard to tell the difference. He’s more open to show her the tricks in how to better work her muscles and gives her a good heavy weight to start. Following him, she does a few bicep curls, not noticing that with each rep her arm starts to get tense and stronger by the second. And that was just the beginning

Meanwhile, Xen and Ollie awake searched all over the place to find Mnema, Ollie picked up her scent and they lead all the way to the gym. At first they were stopped by the staff until Xen showed his biobadge, he asks if they have seen a large grey werewolf with black “gloves and socks” and had a studded collar and possibly a leash. One of the staff guys know this and quickly takes the two into the gym. Xen’s jaw dropped at what he saw. Mnemosyne grew four time as big as she was before. Tremendous biceps, tree trunk thighs, iron abs and a tremendous bosom to match it all pumping the equivalent of a fully-loaded semi’s worth of weights in each hand and one in her mouth. Apparently the effects of her “juiced” body can be invoked with intense activity instead of just force. Suddenly looking at the dragon, Mnema dropped all the weights with a floor shaking thud and runs to Xen with happily wagging her tail and showing off her new monstrously huge body as a show to her master that she is now like the big bodybuilders on the TV.

Impressed, Xen cares more about her safety than looking big and reminds her of that. Reaching up to get her leash, he is stopped by the alpha asking of what he’s doing to her. Xendrian doesn’t want any trouble and explains that she is not what he thinks she is. What could be heated argument ended pretty quickly with Ollie on all fours and a flexed out Mnemosyne showing the alpha wolf can see now that this is an act wild werewolves do to protect a pack or in this case their master, after which the alpha backed away before running rather than dealing with two beefed-up wolves. After some help squeeze her through the door, the rest of the day went well with Xen happy to find Mnemosyne again and so is she. It would take hours before she could fit back into the apartment again but until then, walking the two wolves back home would feel a bit awkward, that it would be a good time for her to get less TV.